INTRODUCTION

The 2011 production year brought a total of 871 projects to New Jersey. These include 67 features, 4 telefilms and mini-series, 210 television series and specials, 25 music videos, 187 industrial, educational, documentary and short films, 351 commercials and 27 webcasts.

This activity generated $84,345,500 for the state economy.

Since 1978, the Motion Picture and Television Commission’s first year of operation, a grand total of 17,935 film and television productions have been made in New Jersey. During that span, production companies have spent approximately $1.7 billion in local cities and towns.
CHAIRMAN’S MESSAGE

While New Jersey offers many advantages to the film and television industry, one of our greatest assets is the level of cooperation that we provide. Filmmakers have many extraordinary needs in order to produce the magical, eye-popping entertainment that we enjoy on movie and television screens every year. They ask for things that are unprecedented. They do things that are not ordinarily done. And it is our job to accommodate them to the fullest extent that we can.

During the past year, the Motion Picture and Television Commission was faced with some daunting challenges. Warner Bros. came to Newark to film scenes from the mega-blockbuster “The Dark Knight Rises.” Their needs were profound. They requested to close down City Hall for a day after spending several days decorating and propping every level of the building. The action scenes to be shot involved guns, explosions and the lighting of various propane fires.

The production company also asked to shut down the Newark Subway for a day and a half, in order to shoot some of the movie’s underground action sequences, and close down the intersection of Broad Street and Raymond Blvd. for several hours to capture crowd scenes. These were scenes that Warner Bros. could not adequately accomplish in other states. But they completed them here, thanks to the assistance of the New Jersey Motion Picture and Television Commission, and the incredible cooperation of the City of Newark, Essex County, and New Jersey Transit.

Although Christopher Nolan shot all of these scenes in a mere two days, they took many months to set up. Nolan needed to scout City Hall in a raging snowstorm earlier in the year, as he was on his way to the airport to fly back to Los Angeles. Although the building was shut due to the inclement weather, we arranged to have the building opened for him. Because the underground sequences demanded the closing of Newark Subway, alternate transportation had to be provided for the daily commuters on the shoot day. This required the creation of a temporary bus service that duplicated the subway route, and a highly elaborate series of detours. The entire operation required numerous meetings with many officials, and an enormous amount of planning. But the Commission is undaunted by such challenges, and our cities and towns, government agencies and residents are incredibly cooperative. And that is how we achieve the seemingly impossible in New Jersey. While not every production presents the formidable challenges of “The Dark Knight Rises,” we are called upon to perform smaller miracles every day. The producers of the Paramount Pictures comedy “My Mother’s Curse,” with Barbra Streisand and Seth Rogen, needed to do a tricky stunt sequence on Route 280, where the Streisand character is about to miss an exit and swerves across five lanes of heavy traffic in order to get to the exit ramp. This sequence required control of the highway as it passes through Kearny, Newark, Orange, Glen Ridge and Caldwell. The Commission procured permissions from all five towns and the New Jersey Department of Transportation, all of whom rose to the occasion. The stunt scene was completed flawlessly.

New Jersey is a rich state that offers a multitude of benefits to producers choosing to film here. But nothing is more valuable to a production company than cooperation. It is the thing that makes “movie miracles” possible.
EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR’S REPORT

Few states in the country – few areas in the world – are as ethnically diverse as New Jersey. The Garden State is the ultimate melting pot, and foreigners have emigrated to our shores for many, many years.

The state’s television industry reflects the cross-cultural fabric of our population. Given New Jersey’s richness and diversity, it is fitting that international television is flourishing here as never before. Ethnic stations and networks are now located in cities and towns throughout Central and Northern New Jersey, broadcasting a breathtaking array of entertainment every day.

Piscataway is home to Pan Desi, an English language network that targets Southern Asians living in the United States. They present reality shows, celebrity interviews, music videos, entertainment news and comedy, reaching a potential audience of over 50 million people across the country.

The network’s programming is specifically tailored for Asians whose lives are enmeshed in the American culture, and that is why all programs are presented in English. But the shows are also designed to appeal to audiences of all ethnicities, and feature attractive young talent, vibrant sets and cutting edge editing.

The studios for Ebru TV, a Turkish network, are located in Somerset. This subsidiary of Samanyolu Broadcasting Company is seen in over 80 different countries. Ebru programming focuses on the sciences, sporting events, the fine arts and various other aspects of culture, with the aim of educating, inspiring and entertaining. The staff is mainly Turkish, but many nations are represented including Azerbaijan, Bulgaria, France, India, Uzbekistan and Turkmenistan. All original programming is broadcast in English; imported shows are English dubbed.

Dandana TV is the top Middle Eastern channel in the United States. Headquartered in a high tech, 13,000 sq. ft. studio in Rochelle Park, this 24 hour station airs live Arab-American talk shows, Middle Eastern music videos, and unconventional entertainment and lifestyle television programming. The signal is carried on Dish Network in the U.S. and Rogers Cable in Canada.

The best known international television network is Univision, which has been broadcasting from New Jersey for many years. They are headquartered in Teaneck and have studios in Paterson. Univision reaches the largest audience of Spanish speaking Americans, and has recently delivered ratings that are on par with the country’s major English language television networks. Univision presents a wide variety of programming with a Latin perspective, and is a major player on the international television scene.

All of these networks combine with outside projects that shoot in the state on a regular or irregular basis, creating a vibrant television industry in New Jersey that employs thousands of residents every year. Whether it is “Arab American Beat,” “Desi Nova” or “Cake Boss,” New Jersey television productions continue to entertain and inform the world.

ECONOMIC IMPACT

New Jersey hosted a tremendous array of motion picture and television production in 2011. Production companies spent a grand total of $84.3 million in the state during the year, while shooting 871 projects here. Since 1978, the production industry has enhanced the New Jersey economy by nearly $1.7 billion, and created hundreds of thousands of jobs in cities and towns across the state.

Filmmakers working on location spend large amounts of money in a concentrated area over a relatively brief period of time. Production companies have a wide variety of needs, including purchases, rentals and hires, and it makes good sense to procure these locally whenever possible.

The needs of production companies vary greatly with every project, but run the gamut from A to Z. The Commission’s Production Services Directory lists 789 different companies in New Jersey, under 214 categories. Some are quite expected: casting agents, crew members, camera, lighting, grip and editing equipment, hotels, makeup artists and supplies, payroll services, stock footage and stuntmen. But other important needs might not spring to mind quite so readily: accounting services, golf carts, cherry pickers, food stylists, dry ice, safety equipment, security services, tents, portable toilets, water trucks and much more.

When a large scale production company arrives in a town, they bring along an army of crew members, and tend to fully utilize the resources that are available locally. Sales at the nearby donut shop will increase by thousands of dollars every month. Restaurants are frequently patronized, and the local grocery store provides copious amounts of food to the production caterer. The gas stations sell tremendous amounts of fuel and provide quick automobile repair. And the stationary, lumber and hardware stores profit immensely. The list is virtually endless.

A single big budget film can enrich the local economy by millions of dollars. For example, “The Dark Knight Rises” was filmed in Newark for only two days last November, and several pre-and-post production days. During that period, however, Warner Bros. spent an estimated $2 million in the city.

Not every film done in New Jersey is a big-budget, special effects extravaganza. Even smaller films contribute significantly to the local economy, however.
The ABC television show “Secret Millionaire” was filmed in Irvington and Newark in July. The producers of the program, Film 24, spent $15,000 at a hotel in Elizabeth; $18,200 for crew and cast meals; $40,000 for crew vehicles; $4,500 for locally hired production assistants; and $1,500 for other supplies and rentals. In addition, they made the following charitable contributions:

- $75,000 to the G.I. Go Fund
- $50,000 to IYO
- $20,000 to Glassworks
- $2,500 to area students

“Blemished Light” was shot in Secaucus in June. The crew of this 69MP production rented rooms at a Secaucus hotel for 30 days, at a cost of $24,000. The producers spent $8,000 for office space in Weehawken, and also rented a studio in Secaucus for the entire length of the shoot.

The accident-prone Mr. Mayhem shot an Allstate commercial in Haworth, Paramus and Edison. Expenditures for this commercial, filmed over the course of three days, include $56,800 in location rental fees, $300 in permit fees, $1,770 for off-duty police, $1,800 for trash removal and $5000 for parking.
The value of hosting film and television production cannot be quantified entirely in monetary terms, however. There are substantial non-tangible benefits. Every day, movies, television programs, music videos and commercials featuring New Jersey locations are shown on cinema and television screens throughout the world. Thus, the state is receiving valuable but cost-free publicity that has tremendous impact on people’s perceptions of our cities and towns. This kind of exposure counteracts the negative stereotypes about New Jersey that have been prevalent for so many years, and replaces them with images of a state that is beautiful, diverse, and a highly desirable place to live, work and vacation.

New Jersey based productions feature some of the greatest talent in the industry today. Last year alone, the following celebrities visited the Garden State and, having seen what lies beyond the Turnpike, became instant good will ambassadors:

PRODUCTION SERVICES

The primary goal of the New Jersey Motion Picture and Television Commission is to promote and foster an active film and television industry in the state. This is accomplished in two ways. First, we establish and maintain close relationships with key decision makers at the studios, independent production companies and television networks, in order to attract projects to New Jersey. Second, we provide a high level of service to production companies working on location in the state, because pleased filmmakers return on a regular basis, and let others know of their satisfaction. Our stellar reputation is our best advertisement.

The Commission performs a host of essential functions in order to assist production crews. Initially, we help filmmakers with the scouting of film locations. Our office maintains a vast location library, containing thousands of available New Jersey locations. The library is continually maintained; photos are added or removed as necessary, and indexed by subject matter and location.
Staff members have an in-depth knowledge of New Jersey geography, and can refer filmmakers to various regions or towns, and to very specific locations that would meet the needs of a production. Producers and directors can be personally escorted on scouting trips during the initial stages of pre-production.

Our office also maintains a location database containing tens of thousands of locations throughout the state, with descriptions, addresses and contacts. This database is updated on a daily basis, and information can be sent to filmmakers instantly via e-mail and fax.

The Commission’s extensive liaison network, comprised of hundreds of contacts from High Point to Cape May, helps us find particularly challenging locations. This network is ever-changing, and contact names and numbers are updated frequently.

A digitized location library has been created, and is ever-expanding. The job of scanning, storing and labeling thousands of digitized photos is enormous and time-consuming, but it enables staff members to transmit pictures over the Internet immediately upon request.
Once the right locations have been found, they need to be secured, and the Commission provides critical assistance in this regard. All staff members have had experience working in the film industry, and have been involved in on-location production. They have a fundamental understanding of a film company’s needs and requirements, the impact of location filmmaking on a community, and the necessary steps that must be taken to protect both the production companies and the towns in which they choose to work.

Commission staffers meet frequently with mayors, town administrators and clerks, and police, fire and construction officials in order to set up productions and ensure that filming in our towns will go smoothly, efficiently, and with a minimum amount of disruption to the communities. Our objective is to make location production a safe, enjoyable and profitable experience for all concerned.

Our office maintains and updates a municipality file, containing information on local film ordinances, rules, regulations and restrictions. This material is provided to all production companies so that they can complete their work without violating any local ordinances or impacting a community in an unwanted or unforseen way. Film permits and ordinances vary greatly from town to town and change frequently. Commission staff members make every effort to steer production companies to areas where the specific requirements of their projects can be met. For example, we would not send a production company to a town with nighttime filming restrictions if their project requires night scenes.

In addition to the location services we provide, the Commission also has regulatory involvement in the issuance of work permits for minors, in conjunction with the New Jersey Department of Labor’s Division of Wage and Hour. Staff members also assist production companies in obtaining permits for theatrical firearms, pyrotechnics, highway occupancy and more.

Production companies working in the state have a vast array of needs beyond the procurement of film locations. They are constantly making purchases, arranging for rentals and contracting for various services. The Commission maintains an on-line Production Services Directory, which is essentially a directory of production related goods and services throughout the state. The Directory is updated on a daily basis.

The Motion Picture and Television Commission’s official web site contains pertinent information about filming in New Jersey, including rules and regulations; weather conditions; topography; an on-line location library; the aforementioned Production Services Directory; a list of productions currently being made in the state, complete with production company addresses and contacts; a historical New Jersey filmography dating back to 1977; a bulletin board with current notices of interest and employment opportunities for filmmakers; and an archive of Commission press releases.

The site also contains information about student internships with the Commission, complete with an electronic application form. We also offer on-line applications to register film-related businesses and public and private locations that are being made available for filming. And all information related to the state’s economic incentives for filmmakers, along with applications, are also available on the site.
The Commission also maintains a vast Oracle database containing records of every production shot in New Jersey. The database contains specific information about each project – where and when it was filmed, and what arrangements were made. It enables staff members to keep important information readily at hand, as each file is essentially a daily diary of every project on which we lend assistance.

The diligent work of the Motion Picture and Television Commission insures that New Jersey retains its time honored reputation as one of the world’s most attractive and desirable locations for film production. This explains the high volume of repeat business that the state enjoys. Studios, networks, production companies and independent filmmakers return here again and again.
The Motion Picture and Television Commission’s internship program is open to all New Jersey residents currently attending colleges and graduate schools. It is also available to select New Jersey high school students who have demonstrated exceptional maturity and high achievement.

Ten individuals were awarded internships in 2011, and afforded the opportunity to assist the Commission and learn about the pre-production and production stages of filmmaking. In addition, these students had the opportunity to visit the sets of films and television programs shooting in the state and, in some cases, to work on projects. Our 2011 interns were:
